Design Speaks:

Artichoke Night School

Session 15
Once and for all: What inspires you?

It might just be the most vexing question asked of designers: what inspires you? But what if the answer isn't quite what you expect. In this highly respected speaker program presented by Artichoke magazine, we explore why and how something inspires.

GEORGE LIVISSIANIS graduated from the University of New South Wales in 1998 with honours in interior architecture and then worked for Burley Katon Halliday. George founded his studio in 2007 and is dedicated to finely crafted, minimal, modest and unpretentious design.

ALISON KUBLER has worked as a curator in Australian museums and galleries for more than twenty years and writes for leading art journals and magazines. In 2013, she co-authored the book Art/Fashion in the 21st Century with Mitchell Oakley-Smith.

STEFANO SCALZO is a principal at Lyons and has over nineteen years experience working on public sector projects across Australia. He has developed expertise in the briefing, planning, design and delivery of major institutional projects, including in the health sector.
