Keynote Addresses.

The power of unique pairings

Presented by Tom

Trenolone, Design director and principal, HDR Architecture, Inc.

"The Park" tells the story of bringing the park back into the Parkland Hospital in Dallas, Texas; "Focus" centres on the Focal Point Community Campus on the southwest side of Chicago and the idea that a medical centre can be more to the urban community than simply a hospital; "Main Street" inversely looks at how the role of the critical access hospital as population anchor could save rural communities. The presentation will conclude with "Ability," the story behind the ground-breaking Shirley Ryan AbilityLab, the first "translational" research hospital in which clinicians, scientists, innovators and technologists work together 24/7 in shared, flexible spaces, surrounding patients, discovering new approaches and applying research in real time.

Design

Presented by Rama Gheerawo,
Director, The Helen Hamlyn Centre for

Do you ever think about how you can make a positive difference in the world and effect real social change? Rama Gheerawo has dedicated his life to this, using his chosen profession of design to enable this work. Rama believes that design is one of the most powerful professions and that it can be used to change the world for the better and address some of the biggest challenges we face in healthcare.

In this keynote presentation, Rama will share inspiring stories and outline challenges drawing on two decades of experience working in inclusive design. The Helen Hamlyn Centre for Design at the Royal College of Art, which he leads, has completed nearly 280 projects with organizations such as Samsung, Unilever and Ford as well as third-sector organizations and governments across the world.

Rama's lecture will show how healthcare can benefit from good design and how to be more creative by involving people in the design process. Projects to be explored include a redesign of the emergency ambulance, ways of making urban space more liveable and loveable, home-care design and creative approaches to paranoia and mental health. The work spans healthcare and wellbeing, from the home to the hospital.

Staying relevant

Presented by Robbie
Robertson, Partner,
Experience Design, Deloitte Digital

In an ever-changing workplace within the healthcare industry, the integration of technology has seen a profound change in the work that we are now undertaking. Cognitive, Al and robotics are fast taking over many of the tasks that have traditionally had to complete. Futurists have predicted that 50 percent of all roles today will not exist by 2030. This is having a fundamental affect on healthcare employees and patients as we all try to stay relevant and up to speed with new frameworks, methodologies and software packages. This is also changing the way we design our hospitals and clinics across the healthcare sector as we move to agile ways of working. Will we be able to keep up to pace as the work, worker and workplace mature at differing speeds?

Presented by Sarah McGann, Dean of Arts and Sciences, The University of Notre Dame

This presentation draws on three case studies to illustrate the importance of interdisciplinary strategic leadership, a lifecycle approach to the design of healthy buildings, and advocates for the inclusion of diagnostic design research in building budgets to inform future briefing documents.
